Scott P. Brinkerhoff is an aggressive, trial-experienced litigator who leverages an MBA to deliver creative, cost-effective solutions for clients.

Mr. Brinkerhoff handles all aspects of high-stakes, complex commercial litigation. His primary practice areas include business litigation, insurance defense, regulatory compliance, products liability, medical malpractice, premises liability, and personal injury.

As a trial attorney, Mr. Brinkerhoff is recognized for his oral advocacy skills and courtroom composure in high-pressure situations. He has successfully tried multiple cases to jury defense verdicts. When not in trial, he utilizes these skills to argue - and win – at hearings before state and federal courts.

Outside of the courtroom, Mr. Brinkerhoff has taken and defended countless fact and expert depositions all over the country. He is adept at eliciting favorable testimony through meticulous preparation and unwavering perseverance in the face of adversity.

In addition to his customary caseload, Mr. Brinkerhoff has dedicated his time and legal skills to various pro bono efforts. For example, he successfully represented small-batch cottage food producers in a dispute with the Texas Department of State Health Services in connection with the regulatory enforcement of the Texas Cottage Food Law, resulting in the legislative passage of SB 572 that expanded the statutory scope of cottage foods exempt from the requirements of a food service establishment under Texas law.
