Trish is a partner of FisherBroyles LLP, practicing in the firm's Corporate Department and its Finance Practice. She has extensive experience representing corporate borrowers in complex financing arrangements, including leveraged and investment grade borrowings, high-yield debt offerings, structured finance, and other capital markets transactions.

In addition to traditional financings, she regularly represents corporate borrowers and issuers across numerous industries in complicated financing transactions, both domestic as well as international, including syndicated and bilateral credit facilities in U.S. dollars as well as foreign currencies, commercial paper programs in U.S dollars and Euros, private placements, floor plan financings, acquisition financings, and warehouse lending facilities. She has represented corporate borrowers in work-out transactions both inside and outside of bankruptcy, including debtor-in-possession financings.

Trish has structured, negotiated and documented a wide variety of derivative transactions, including interest rate and currency exchange agreements, equity index, total return, and other hedging transactions, as well as liquidity and credit enhancement measures.

She has also represented issuers, underwriters and rating agencies in asset securitization transactions. Financial assets have included auto loans and leases, agricultural and construction equipment chattel paper, credit card receivables, health care receivables, future cash flows, government contract receivables, Chapter 13 plans, delinquent credit card receivables, television revenues, trade receivables, lease receivables, mortgage loans, stranded utility costs, home equity loans and home equity lines of credit.
